

Check out this rapping teen's ode to 'Math Nation'

extracredit.blog.palmbeachpost.com/2016/12/08/check-out-this-rapping-teens-ode-to-math-nation/

Atlantic High junior Jackson Destine

Destine was so pleased with how it helped his improvement in math class that his teacher suggested he write a song about the program.

Destine went above and beyond. Not only did he pen a rap song about the math-tutoring program in a day, he performed it at Wednesday's school board meeting.

"This is a story about how Math Nation really helps students go from an F grade to an A grade," he said by way of presentation.

Watch the video below or find it here:

The two-minute song takes listeners through his struggles in math and his progress with the program. It even name-checks Gov. Rick Scott.

"See to be honest I thought it'd be boring," he raps. "But after five minutes I started learning."
